Why sibling support is intrinsic

AIFS Conference | September 2026

Acknowledgements

Paying respect to the Wurundjeri Woi-wurrung people of the Kulin nation

Recognising the voices and lived experience of siblings and the knowledge it brings to making support more inclusive and meaningful

Early childhood matters

- Early experiences shape life trajectories across a range of domains

Disability and family capacity

- Families have finite capacity
- When one child has high support needs, the demands on parents intensify

Siblings are siblings

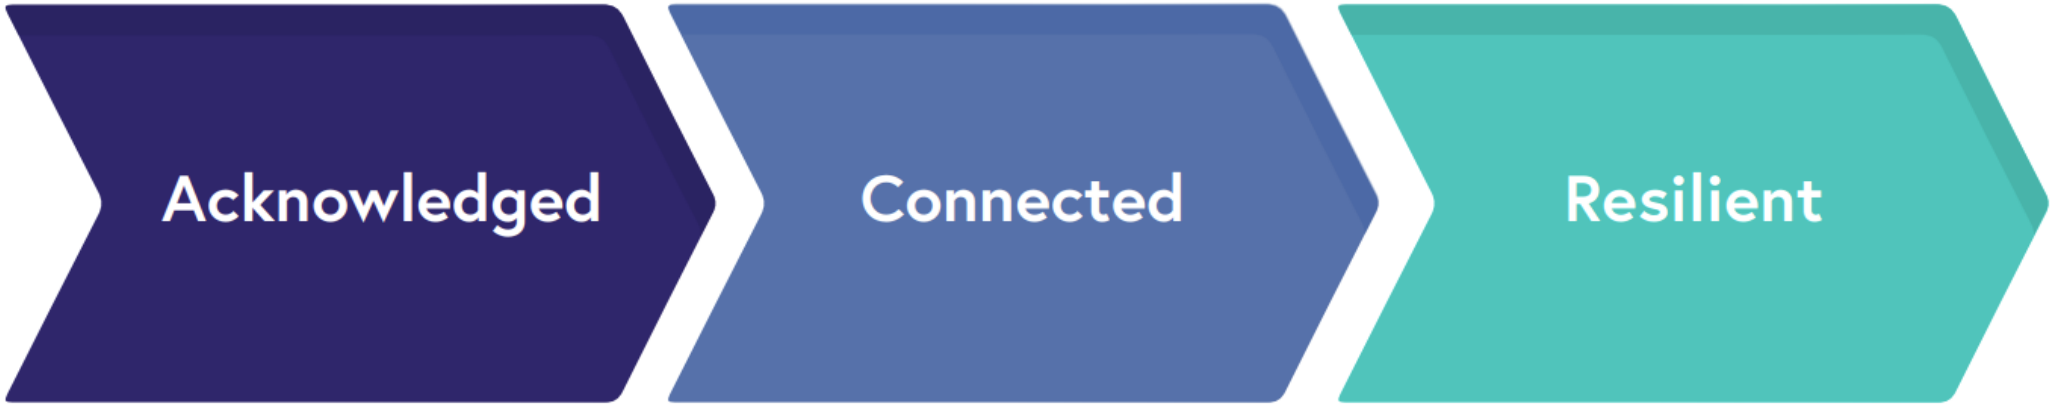

- A failure of the system cannot become an expectation of informal care from another child

Early childhood can't just matter for some children
